

Collier County Schools

Most Southwest Florida schools have an impressive score in the annual grade given by the State of Florida. The grades are determined through the use of Florida Comprehensive Assessment Test scores, which rate students' achievement on six levels. Schools earn points for students who achieve at grade level or above, levels three through six; for students who move up an achievement level; and for low-performing students who move up a level. High schools earn bonus points if more than half of students retaking the FCAT pass the exam. The schools must also test a high percentage of their students, more than 90 percent, and must improve the achievement levels of at least half their lowest-performing students.

Overall, Collier and Lee County school districts were designated "A" districts by the Florida Department of Education.
